Northern California's Newest High School Allows Students
To Attend School Online, Tuition-Free

High-Touch Environment Supports and Guides Students on Path to Success

May 27, 2008 – Insight School of California – North Bay has received authorization by the Windsor Unified School District in Sonoma County and is now accepting Fall Semester 2008 applications for high school students in Contra Costa, Lake, Marin, Mendocino, Napa, Solano and Sonoma counties. Insight School of California – North Bay is a tuition-free, diploma-granting, online public high school offering a unique approach to online learning that encompasses high levels of personal attention and student support, flexibility, curriculum scope, academic quality and parental involvement.

Information sessions about Insight School of California – North Bay are planned for June 11-21, 2008, at 24 locations throughout the above counties to provide valuable information on the key benefits of attending an online high school for families and students who are not finding a productive fit with their local “bricks and mortar” public high school environment. The sessions will include an online demonstration of a typical classroom session, a review of the robust Insight Schools curriculum, a question and answer period, and application materials.

“A unique level of personalization and individual support for each of our students is one of our most fundamental commitments,” said Keith Oelrich, founder and CEO of Insight Schools Inc. “Our goal is to deliver academic excellence in a safe, flexible, virtual environment with highly qualified, California credentialed teachers. Self-motivated, independent students thrive in this setting. We also actively involve parents to help them support their students and enable them to monitor their student’s progress.”

Insight School of California – North Bay offers a powerful approach for accommodating a range of personal situations and goals for students who:

- May be unhappy with conditions and opportunities at their local high school
- Live in a rural or remote area
- Must work or have child/family care responsibilities
- Are pursuing their dreams in sports entertainment, modeling, dancing or other careers
- Do not function well in large classroom settings
- Do not connect well socially at school
- Are challenged with health or physical issues
- Reach their creative peak in the evening and find it difficult to attend school in the early morning
- Need more challenging coursework to progress at an accelerated pace
- Are home-schooled and seeking subject matter help from a certified teacher

Insight School of California – North Bay students will be able to complete their studies in their own setting at their own speed. Experienced faculty and Insight “iMentors” will work closely to tailor a top-quality academic program to each student’s personal learning styles and situation. The school’s sophisticated, yet user-friendly, Student Information System will provide real-time, online visibility into grades, attendance, teacher comments, student-teacher interaction and parent-teacher interaction.

Student forums, clubs, online activities, events, field trips and community service provide a means for active social interaction. In addition to being tuition-free, the school will provide students with a wireless laptop computer, a printer/scanner, reimbursement for Internet access and materials for required courses.

"I love Insight School," said Harini Kompella, a graduating senior at Insight School of California – Los Angeles. "I've been accepted at several great universities including UCLA, UC Davis, UC San Diego and California State University at Northridge. "I like how our course schedule is structured, so I can be flexible with when I do my homework. It has allowed me to take more responsibility for my lifestyle, and I've been able to volunteer in my community during the day. This learning environment has truly helped me in achieving my aspirations."
